Founder & Author of Mind Education

Definition of Mind Education

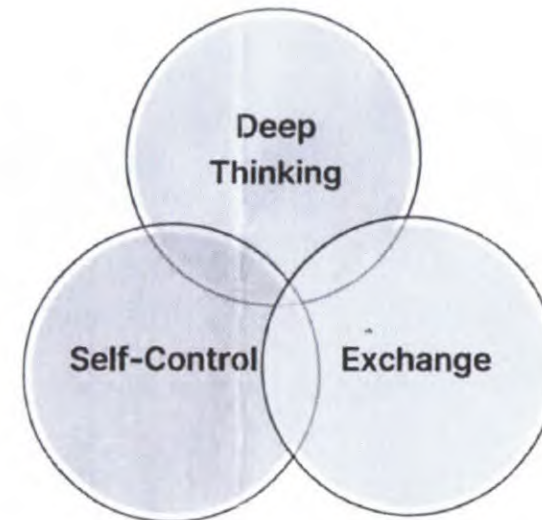

Dr. Ock Soo Park is a world-renowned educator and speaker. He predicted 25 years ago that knowledge and technology-based education alone could no longer change and develop adolescents. Inspired from the principles of the heart in the Bible – he applied it to the field of education and developed “Mind Education.”

Mind Education moves away from education that emphasizes ‘do’ or ‘don’t’ actions, and instead focuses on thinking deeply, practicing self-control, sharing and exchanging with one another, along with strengthening mind-sets.

Mind Education has proven its outstanding educational effects across the years in all fields of education, and many governments and educational institutions are rushing to introduce Mind Education in their respective areas of expertise.

| The Core Values |

Mind Education teaches about the World of the Heart through the 3 core values of Mind Education: Deep Thinking, Self-Control and Exchange. If young people learn these 3 core values, they will be able to overcome any obstacles in life and grow to become sound-minded, resilient people. Mind Education lecturers provide in-depth case studies that analyze theory and real-life cases of change in the World of the Heart, which provide the foundation for the 3 core values of Mind Education.

"The Digital Transformation Era, Mind Education is the future."

IYF Mind Education has garnered global attention for its outstanding educational effects and performance in leading change. As governments around the world look to introduce Mind Education in their respective countries – there is a need to first foster educators who can deliver such education.

Thus, as an extended program of the IYF Education Forum (IEF), a Mind Education Leadership Course has been established for educators. Participants will be able to learn the core principles of Mind Education through lectures by Mind Education professionals, and will then partake in various discussion groups to further contemplate and share on what they have learned. By doing so, educators will be able to obtain a proper understanding of and training on Mind Education so that they may apply it when teaching their students.

| Mind Education : Principles and Case Studies Textbook |

In 2024, the Mind Leadership Course will be conducted using the textbook 'Mind Education: Principles and Case Studies.' This book covers topics and principles for discussing the power of deep thinking, sharing emotions, building meaningful relationships with others, and cultivating resilience to brighten and energize life. The book is structured into 50 individual lessons within five interconnected learning units. Each lesson consists of 1) key lessons, 2) case studies explaining the abstract aspects of the lessons through specific examples, and 3) activities to firmly instill the concepts. Through this book, various topics related to Mind Education can be explored, providing new perspectives. Discussions on how to apply these concepts in real life can take place through specific examples and case studies.

| Mind Lecture |

With the widening gap between material civilization and spiritual culture due to rapid economic growth, youth issues such as gaming addiction, school violence, bullying, suicide, and drug abuse have emerged as serious social problems. In response, Mind Lectures are gaining attention as educational programs actively supporting youth to set and achieve genuine values and purposes in life, paving the way for the country's future. Mind Lectures have helped people worldwide deeply understand the realm of the mind and experience transformative changes in life. Through this, we hope individuals can discover true values and happiness, clarifying the purpose of life. Mind Lectures are expected to positively and constructively impact youth, contributing to their growth as responsible contributors to the nation's future.

| Action Learning |

Action Learning combines 'Action' and 'Learning' by creating teams led by a Learning Coach in order to address real-life problems by identifying the cause of the problem and developing the necessary solutions. Open discussions and team cooperation naturally led to creative problem solving abilities and change in awareness.

| Mind Recreation |

Mind Recreation allows participants to gain a better understanding of the Mind Education topics, by participating in various recreational games and hands-on activities.

| Group Discussion |

After listening to Mind Lectures, educators will use various discussion techniques in order to express and share their thoughts, and thereby think deeply on the topics. In addition, by presenting the output of their discussions, they will have their perspectives broadened and gain deeper understanding on Mind Education concepts.

| Case Presentation |

Through country-specific case presentations, participants can examine how Mind Education is concretely implemented in each country, gaining insights and learning about the role of Mind Education.
